WORKSHOP REPORT
Countering the Financing of Terrorism in Africa
1st and 2nd of June 2023, APSTA Secretariat, Yaounde, Cameroon

The African Peace Support Trainers Association (APSTA), organized an international workshop on : "Countering the financing of terrorism in West and Central Africa" on 1st and 2nd June, 2023. APSTA is a Pan-African Association mandated to harmonize and standardize Peace Support Operations training. The Association thus contributes to strengthening the capacities of actors to respond effectively to peace and security challenges in a dynamic African strategic environment. This constant reinforcement of capacities guarantees the efficiency of peace support operations under the aegis of the African Union.

The Yaoundé workshop is a high-level scientific and professional meeting, whose objective was to equip participants with best practice on countering the financing of terrorism in Africa, and raise awareness on the instruments, mechanisms as well as global and sectoral challenges against response. The participants are high-level actors and stakeholders on countering terrorism financing, drawn from various related sectors, particularly the defence and security sector, peace and security training institutions and centres, as well as practitioners and academics working on countering the financing of terrorism. The international workshop comprised an opening ceremony, presentations, panel discussions, plenary sessions and a closing ceremony.

The opening ceremony, held on Thursday 1st of June 2023, interspersed with remarks by dignitaries, viz: welcome address by Police Commissioner, Dr OYONO THOM Cécile, Executive Secretary of APSTA; Opening Remarks by Colonel SOULEYMANE SANGARE, Director of the Alioune Blondin Bèye Peacekeeping School in Bamako Mali and Chairperson of APSTA's Board of Directors; keynote address by Mr. Philip DIVETT, Programme Officer Terrorism Prevention Branch of United Nations Office for Drugs and Crime (UNODC/TPB), Vienna, Austria; and the opening address by Mr. SAID KAMSOULOUM, Secretary General of the Ministry of Defence, representing the Minister Delegate at the Presidency, in charge of Defence.

In her welcome address, Police Commissioner, Dr. OYONO THOM Cécile, Executive Secretary of APSTA, reiterated the mission and status of APSTA, as a Pan-African institution mandated by the African Union Commission to standardize and harmonize training on peace support operations in Africa. She noted that pursuant to this mandate, APSTA partners and collaborates with related international organizations, such as the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC). The Executive Secretary further noted that the Association is a beneficiary of support from national governments, particularly the Government of the Republic of Cameroon, through the Ministry of External Relations and the Ministry of Defence. She expressed APSTA's profound gratitude for this support. Regarding the workshop, she emphatically stressed the detrimental effects of terrorists' access to funding, as it contributes to their resilience and expansion despite substantial efforts by States and international actors. Thus, she affirmed the critical importance of the international workshop, aimed at furnishing participants with grids of fresh knowledge and action against a phenomenon still poorly defined.

In his opening remarks, Colonel SOULEYMANE SANGARE, Chairperson of APSTA's Board of Directors, emphasized the mission, objectives and areas of interest of APSTA. He highlighted the research activities carried out over the years thanks to the support of partners. In particular, he stressed the fact that the Sahel region has become the epicentre of terrorism, noting that recent studies reveal financing of terrorism as a major factor in terrorists' resilience. Thus, he affirmed the imperative of organizing workshops of this nature as well as conducting specialized training to strengthen capacities in countering the scourge.

The Chairperson recalled that since its establishment in 2002, as the African Chapter of the International Association of Peacekeeping Training Centres, APSTA has indeed come a long way in the discharge of her mandate, facilitating the standardization, harmonization and coordination of training and sundry capacity building, in support of the development of the African Standby Force, pursuant to the 2008 MoU with the African Union. He further noted that APSTA, through its Secretariat, has facilitated the exchange of ideas, lessons, experiences and best practice among member institutions and other stakeholders, as depicted once again by today's workshop on "Countering the Financing of Terrorism in West and Central Africa".

He, however, noted that the continued fulfilment of this noble mandate, would have probably been terminated some years ago, if not for the timely intervention of the Government of the Republic of Cameroon, who, upon the request of members of the Board of Directors, endorsed an Agreement with the Association in 2019, to domicile the Secretariat of APSTA in Yaoundé Cameroon, granting it the desired standing of an international organization with diplomatic status. He noted that the Agreement included annual grants to offset most of the Secretariat's yearly operational costs. Thus, he expressed the Association's gratitude to the Government of the Republic of Cameroon, recalling that the workshop interlaced with the Open Day event, aims to showcase the instance and operations of APSTA in and from the territory of Cameroon.

In conclusion, he affirmed the Secretariat's diligence in implementing the renewed vision of the Board of Directors since 2020, as well as the expressed intention of the AU Commissioner for Political Affairs Peace and Security, who requested APSTA's support on strengthening capacities for preventing and countering violent extremism and terrorism. He therefore expressed the Association's profound gratitude to the Terrorism Prevention Branch, of the United Nations Office for Drugs and Crime for the support. Finally, he commended the Executive Secretary and her team for a job well done, and enjoined more partners to support APSTA. Consequently, he urged participants to take advantage of the workshop, for the exchange of lessons, experience and best practice aimed at strengthening requisite capacities, noting that without peace, there cannot be sustainable development.

In his keynote address, Mr. Philip DIVETT, Programme Officer, CFT Focal Point (UNODC/TPB), UNODC-Vienna, first expressed his gratitude to APSTA for the opportunity to address dignitaries, experts and participants of the international workshop. Secondly, he critiqued the temptation of an overt focus on hard security in countering terrorists, while paying less attention to the more crucial planning phase of terrorists' acts, which includes recruitment, radicalization and sophisticated training – all of which make financing imperative. He thus, affirmed financing as a key component, required to cater for the operational cost of terrorism, regardless of complexity and context. He noted that the planning phase presents a good opportunity to detect, interrupt and dismantle terrorists' networks, and thus affirmed that it should be the primary target of national actors - gathered for the workshop, as they have important roles to play.

Furthermore, Mr. Divett underscored the importance of robust, proactive and effective policies on countering the financing of terrorism, which have been widely acknowledged especially in the last 20 years. Among the key milestone policy instruments, he noted the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism (1999); the UN Resolution 1267 (1999); the UN Resolution 1373 (2001); and the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), especially its special recommendations on CFT. At the level of the African Union, he noted the adoption of OAU Convention on the Prevention and Combating of Terrorism (1999); the AU Plan of Action on the Prevention and Combating of Terrorism (2002); the Additional Protocol (2004); and the establishment of the African Centre for the Study and Research on Terrorism (ACSRT) in 2004. He explained that these Conventions and Resolutions, all shape the legal, policy, and institutional frameworks for countering the financing of terrorism, and especially for regulation of international cooperation and mutual legal assistance in investigation and prosecution.

As point in emphasis, he drew attention to four (4) critical challenges: first, the absence of an international consensus on the definition of terrorism, despite its use in these international frameworks and instruments; second, the rapid and continuous evolution of methods used in financing of terrorism, including the Hawala system, mobile payments, use of social media platforms, crypto-currencies, and illicit trafficking of all sorts of items including precious stones; third, the modest amounts of money sometime used in prosecuting terrorist attacks, which are too insignificant to detect; four, the challenges of coordination and cooperation among government agencies, private sector actors, law enforcement agencies, international organisations, civil society organisations as well as cross-border cooperation. Therefore, he observed that the workshop provides veritable opportunity for reflection on how these various agencies can collaborate on CFT, through intelligence sharing and coordination of efforts. Finally, he reiterated the readiness of UNODC in supporting national and regional actors.

Tour of APSTA Situation Room

The tour of APSTA Situation Room was observed after the opening ceremony. During the tour, Mr. Christian ICHITE, Deputy Executive Secretary and Programmes Coordinator of APSTA, explained the Situation Room's raison d'être, underscoring the need for reliable data that facilitates rigorous conflict analysis, in contrast to the pervading shallow and simplistic analysis of conflicts across the continent in recent time. This, he inferred may account significantly for disoriented interventions as well as resilience and spread of threats like terrorism, for which the Sahel alone currently accounts for 48% of global deaths. He affirmed that the room is dedicated to monitoring conflicts and interventions across Africa, emphasizing that while several institutions monitor conflicts, only few if any monitor interventions systematically.

He explained that the project is being developed in two (2) phases. Phase one, focuses on data mining and Data Management. This phase includes the acquisition of data from pre-selected indicators and sources, analysis of the data and the generation of reports for diverse purposes. The second phase will focus on advanced data analytics and prognostics. He noted that the conceptualization of the Situation Room will facilitate the integration of systems thinking into conflict analysis. He asserted that through the instrumentality of the Situation Room, the role of APSTA in harmonization and standardization of training will be reinforced. Moreover, it will facilitate the Secretariat's responsibility as a think-tank, in support of member institutions and other training centres across Africa. It will also serve as platform for exchange by expert groups, either virtually or in-person.

Presentations And Panel Discussions

In his introduction to the workshop sessions, Mr. Julius SEIDENADER, specialist in counter terrorism, Terrorism Prevention Branch, United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC/TPB), recalled the approval of the United Nations General Assembly mandating the UNODCTPB to support Member States in the ratification and implementation of universal legal instruments against terrorism. He affirmed that UNODC is at the disposal of Member States for assistance in countering terrorism as well as for international cooperation in related fields.

In accordance with APSTA Secretariat Programme plan and under the Scientific Coordination of Professor SAIBOU ISSA, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, Letters and Human Sciences (FALSH), University of Maroua, the presentations and panel discussions were structured in five parts:

- » Part One - Understanding the threats and risks related to terrorism and terrorism financing ;
- » Part Two - Modalities of terrorism financing in Africa and emerging dynamics in the modus operandi ;
- » Part Three - Legal and institutional frameworks for countering the financing of terrorism in West and Central Africa ;
- » Part Four - International tools for countering the financing of terrorism;
- » Part Five - Lessons and experiences on countering the financing of terrorism in West and Central Africa.

Part One : Understanding the threats and risks related to terrorism and terrorism financing

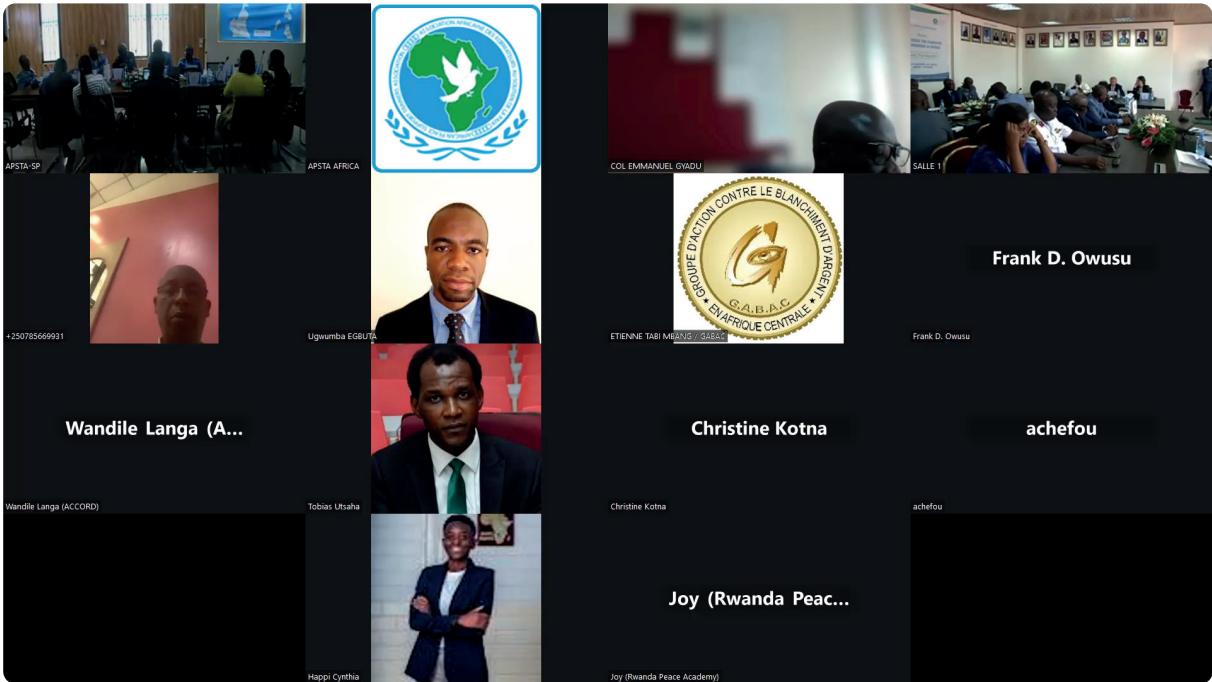

Moderated by Ms. Emmanuelle KLASSEN (Associate Programme Officer, Global Programme on Money Laundering, UNODC – Vienna, Austria).

Session 1 : The nature and emerging trends of terrorism and terrorist financing in Africa by Professor SAIBOU ISSA, Dean of Faculty of Arts Letters and Human Sciences, University of Maroua, Cameroon

Professor SAIBOU ISSA began his presentation with an overview of the terrorist menace in Africa. He emphasized the circumstances of its origin and the diversity of the determinants that nourish the phenomenon of terrorism across the continent. In consideration of the ideology, economy, politics and the existence of conflict entrepreneurs, he affirmed the imperative of contextualisation as well as the interweaving of factors in regional environments marked by conflict systems. Thus, he stressed the problematic that derives from the nexus between the different forms of conflict and among the fragilities exploited by non-state armed groups in general and terrorists in particular.

He illustrated his presentation with cartographic and statistical analysis of terrorist activities which reflect their significance in the Sahel (taken in the broad sense) and in East Africa, as well as emanating from the equatorial forest and the Atlantic coast. He noted that the G5 Sahel and the Lake Chad Basin Commission (LCBC) through the Multinational Joint Task Force (MNJTF), have mobilized regional responses alongside national efforts, and have managed to decimate the threat of terrorism substantially in respective regions. He however observed that the menace still remains very active. He therefore drew the participants' attention to the need to monitor and even anticipate, the criminal dynamics and itineraries of terrorism on the continent, which are backed by the two major terrorist conglomerates: Al Qaeda and the Islamic State, but nevertheless remain driven by undertones of indigenization.

Consequently, Prof. Saibou affirmed that while external sources of funding and conventional modes of financing terrorism in Africa have been noted in various studies, including those by the financial action task forces (FATF), le groupe d'action contre le blanchiment d'argent en Afrique Centrale (GABAC) and the Inter-governmental action group against money laundering in West Africa (GIABA) in particular, the fact remains that the resilience of terrorism and its prospects also depend on the ability of terrorists to innovate on the sources and mechanisms for collecting, consolidating and using funds. He further noted that the model of financing adopted by terrorists, results from the risks and practices based on diversification, flexibility and the exploitation of money laundering facilities within weak state fiscal systems, which are poorly regulated. In conclusion, he drew attention to the importance of mastering both the known counter mechanisms and standards, as well as endogenizing the responses, in order to adapt them to the methods of financing and the local dynamics of terrorism. Thus, he recommended among others, the inclusion of more services such as customs, animal husbandry and forestry, into countering the financing of terrorism across Africa.

Session 2 : The international framework and standards for countering the financing of terrorism by Mr. Julius SEIDENADER, Counter Terrorism Specialist, Terrorism Prevention Branch, United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) - Vienna, Austria

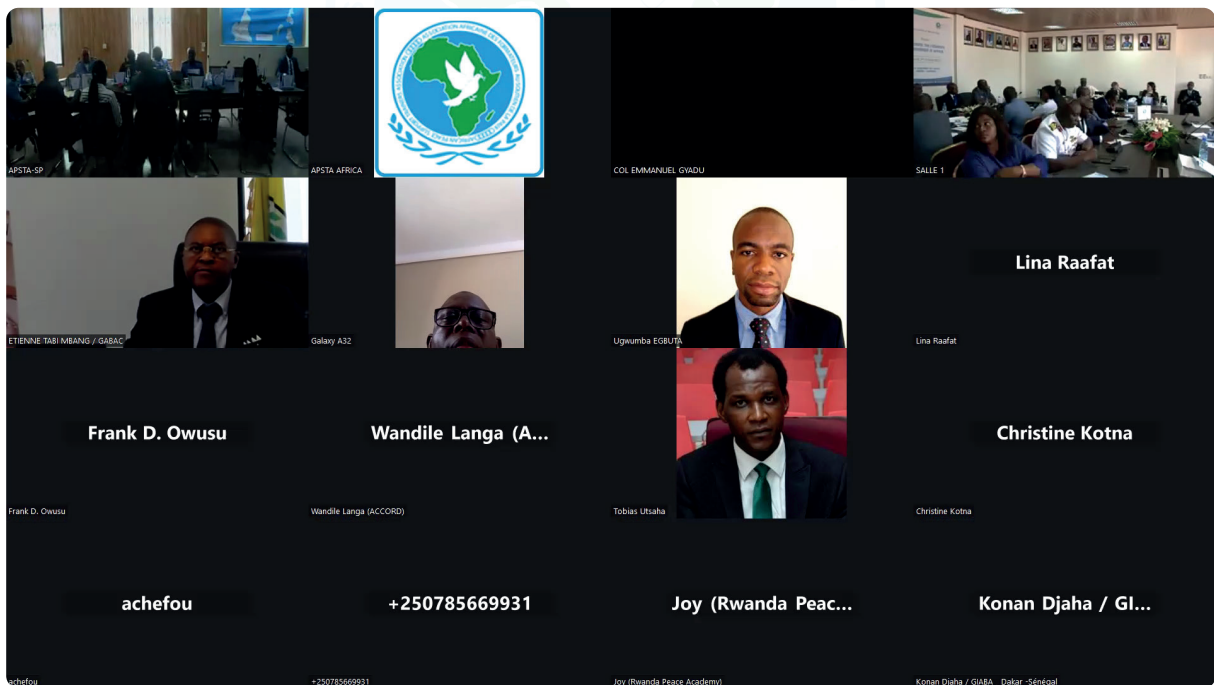

In his presentation, Mr. Seidenader recalled the mandate of the terrorism prevention branch of UNODC, particularly the ratification and implementation of the 19 different international legal instruments on preventing and countering terrorism. He further enumerated the international framework for countering the financing of terrorism, starting with the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism of 1999. He also highlighted other frameworks including the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), Security Council Resolutions 1267 (1999), 1373 (2001), 1988 and 1989 (2012), 2178 (2014), 2135 (2015), 2368 (2017). To these are added several international texts relating to the fight against terrorism.

He noted however, that despite the existence of these international frameworks on countering terrorism and terrorism financing, there is not yet a consensus definition of terrorism. He subsequently alluded to and adopted the definition of terrorism provided in Art.2 of the 1999 Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism. He further underscored States' obligations, international cooperation and implementation tools, as contained in the 1999 Convention.

He also noted that States have developed national tools to counter the financing of terrorism, and underscored fact that the 1999 Convention calls on States to exchange information systems provided by INTERPOL.

He affirmed that to effectively counter the financing of terrorism, it is essential to understand its operational cycle, which goes from raising funds, storing them as asserts or funds, moving these asserts/funds and using them. Finally, he underscored some challenges especially technical compliance with recommendations and lack of collaboration by law enforcement agencies as well as incomplete terrorism financing risk assessment, which he observed could be transformed into opportunities if well accomplished, and used in addressing both policy and strategy issues. He recommended the use of the UNODC Guidance Manual (2018), and reaffirmed the importance of States taking stock of compliance with standards combating money laundering and the financing of terrorism through mutual evaluations.

Session 3 : Overview of terrorist financing mechanisms in Africa by Mr. Abdou CHEFOU, Senior Law Enforcement Expert in the fight against terrorism, UNODC - Niger

In his presentation, Prof. Saibou affirmed that subsidiaries of Al Qaeda (JNIM, AQIM and Al-Shabab) and the Islamic State (ISWAP, EIGS and ISCAP) are the main terrorist threats in Africa. They raise funds through trade and other income-generating activities, NGOs, smuggling and drug trafficking; sources which are transnational and come from licit companies but equally emanate from illicit activities. They also use zakat, financial transactions among jihadists, kidnapping for ransom, cattle rustling, arms and drug trafficking. Among other actors in the financing of terrorism in Africa, the author underscored the role of charitable organisations and NGOs which are exploited by terrorists. He further noted that terrorism financing in Africa is being rapidly facilitated by terrorist and criminal networks engaged in various types of trafficking, especially from Latin America, via West Africa towards Europe.

He lamented the lack of adequate security particularly in the Sahel region including the north of Nigeria, Niger and Mali, which creates a favourable space for the trafficking of contraband goods and all sorts of merchandise. In addition, he noted that owing to the similarity and link between the mission and objectives of various terrorist groups operating in Africa, they equally show solidarity by lending or donating money to each other, in a bid to facilitate mutual interests. In conclusion, Mr. Chefou underscored weak presence of the State and corresponding lack of security in zones occupied by terrorists in the Sahel as major reason facilitating the zone ('ungoverned spaces') as corridor for illicit trafficking of all sorts. He also noted that illicit exploitation of natural resources in the zone account for about 64% of funds for financing conflicts and all forms of instability in the zone.

Session 4 : Financing of terrorism, risks in Central Africa and opportunities for disruption by Ms. Emmanuelle KLASSEN, Associate Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Officer, Global Programme against Money Laundering, UNODC - Vienna, Austria

In her submissions, Ms Klassen presented the mandate of the Global Programme against Money Laundering, Proceeds of Crime and the Financing of Terrorism, emphasizing the need to strengthen the capacities of Member States as well as following-up for an effective implementation of measures in accordance with international standards. She noted that the Programme provides valuable technical assistance to States in Central Africa on countering the financing of terrorism. Furthermore, she explained the approach for financial investigations to detect the financing of terrorism, and underscored three (3) benefits, viz: first, the identification of the spread of the terrorist group; second, the identification and tracking of criminal proceeds; and third, the development of information and evidence that could be used in planning the disruption or during penal procedure. She noted among others that key elements in disrupting financial transactions include inter-agency cooperation, international cooperation, access to databases and public-private partnerships. In conclusion, she elaborated the methodology for disruption of terrorism financing, as a key tool of the UNODC, which involves establishing objectives, understanding the business model (Collection – Transfer – Conservation and - Utilization), identifying vulnerabilities and opportunities, disrupting measures and mitigating risk.

Session 5 : Terrorism financing linked to Mobile payments and Hawala in West and Central Africa by Mr. Julius SEIDENADER, Counter Terrorism Specialist, Terrorism Prevention Branch, United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), Vienna, Austria

In his presentation, Mr Seidenader noted the huge growth in the use of mobile payment systems in Africa with transaction value of over $800billion and the subsequent abuse by terrorist groups. He underscored the growth of Hawala system of payments across Africa; Hawala is more traditionally used in Middle East and Afghanistan, and now spreading to many other parts of the world. He further underscored the debate on financial inclusion across Africa via banking systems and the continents preference for mobile payments instead of traditional banking channels. He affirmed the growth of transactions value by 22% between 2021 and 2022 in West and Central Africa, increasing from $1trillion to around $1.26 trillion, while the number of mobile agents grew from 12 million in 2021 to around 17 million in 2022 - a staggering 41% year-on-year increase, a growth much of which was in Nigeria where a liberalised regulatory regime has led to an increase in Mobile Money Payments.

He further noted the abuse of the use of electronic payment systems by almost all terrorist groups operating in Africa, as revealed in findings by GABAC, GIABA and FATF. In Cameroon, he noted that the financing of terrorism is facilitated by the pre-eminence of fiduciary money, the existence of informal types of Hawala and channels for transferring funds, as well as the absence of an effective mechanism to control cross-border physical transfers, the porosity of borders and the free movement of goods and people in an economic and monetary area shared between five borders. In conclusion, he recommended among others, the regulation of electronic payments; strengthening and adapting legislation to a rapidly developing framework; mandating a national supervisory agency; and improving cooperation among private sector, financial institutions and law enforcement authorities.

Session 6 : The Exploitation of Mines and the financing of terrorism in the Sahel by Ms. Sofia DEMS, Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme Officer (UNODC/GPML)

In her submissions, Ms Dems focused on the illegal exploitation of natural mineral resources by terrorist groups particularly in West Africa, for the purpose of raising funds. She affirmed the infiltration of terrorist groups in the global market for precious stones as well as their propensity to control artisanal mining sites and activities, by coercing local labourers in the mining sector to be part of their network as facilitators. She justified this quest to control mining sites with the geographical localization of terrorist groups in the Sahel, mostly around artisanal mining sties. She emphasized artisanal gold mining in particular, as a significant resource which can easily be stocked, transported across borders, and conveniently sold, as source of informal revenue which is not captured in State's fiscal systems, and therefore does not disrupt local economy significantly.

She noted that the absence of State supervision and lack of transparency emboldens the actors, facilitating Money Laundering. Moreover, she underscored multiple vulnerabilities of both artisanal miners and the informal mining sector coupled with porous borders, as enabling factors in the underlying artisanal mining ecosystem that facilitate the avoidance of due diligence. Thus, she recommended an understanding and analysis of these supply chain vulnerabilities including extraction, trading, transporting and exporting of these precious stones; as well as the need to enact several administrative actions, in order to curb this phenomenon.

Part Three : The legal and institutional frameworks for Countering the Financing of terrorism in West and Central Africa

Moderated by Mr. Julius SEIDENADER, Counter Terrorism Specialist, Terrorism Prevention Branch, United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), Vienna, Austria

Session 7 : The legal and institutional framework for the fight against terrorism in West and Central Africa by Colonel Benoit DJAHA KONAN, GIABA

In his submissions, Col Djaha Konan noted that despite the absence of a consensus definition, there is a general understanding of the concept of terrorist financing, as the provision, collection, management or attempt to provide goods, financial or other assistance, directly or indirectly, voluntarily or not, intended for the partial or total commission of an act which constitutes an offense against the legal instruments in the fight against terrorism. It also includes any act intended to injure or kill civilians not taking direct part in hostilities in a situation of armed conflict. He noted that the Anti Money Laundering - Countering Financing of Terrorism (AML-CFT) Legal Framework provides for the prevention, detection, investigation, professional secrecy, repression and international cooperation in the area of AML/CFT.

He further noted that GIABA provides support to Member States through the Interministerial Committee for the Fight against Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing, in synergy and commitment for the apprehension of terrorists. He affirmed that these include the monitoring of cross-border movements, as well as the development of State programmes for detecting and profiling cases. Thus, he concluded that given the complexity and diversity of terrorist financing, national counter-terrorist financing policies should be strengthened with FATF standards, to improve national coordination mechanisms and inter-agency counter-terrorism cooperation.

Session 8 : Challenges and Approaches for law enforcement in Countering the Financing of Terrorism in West and Central Africa by Mr. Abdou CHEFOU, UNODC Senior Counter Terrorism Law Enforcement Expert, Niger

In his presentation, Mr Chefou, on the basis of field experience asserts that terrorists require financing for both action and existence. He expounded various aspects of their operation requiring financing, such as logistics, remuneration of combatants and sympathisers, propaganda on social media and training. In their sources of financing, he included grants, money gotten from illegal activities, money laundering, ransoms gotten from kidnappings, seizure of donations made to NGOs in cash and kind. He noted that once collected, these funds are distributed and circulated through Hawala networks, NGOs, money transfers agencies and company bank accounts.

Therefore, he affirmed that during investigations, investigators have to focus on elements of evidence such as irregularities in transfers, transfers made to sensitive areas, non-respect of customs declaratory obligations, extortions and kidnappings. To these, he added judicial authorisations which are required to carry out search and verifications. He further listed some of the difficulties encountered including: identifying the destination/receiver and proving that the funds are actually meant for terrorist groups; and proving the complicity of the sender and intermediaries in transfers aimed at terrorist groups.

He affirmed that the main objective of these financial investigations is to ensure the rule of law, deprive criminals of illegal wealth, destabilise criminal networks, as well as identify and record events linked to money transfer. He further enumerated the process of financial investigations as well as presented some reflections on strategies for obtaining evidence, evaluation of the criminal environment and where to obtain financial information - emphasizing both local and international levels. Finally, he stressed the imperative of understanding the group's business model/financial model through interviews with members of the group. In his opinion, these should facilitate an increase in convictions pursuant to common law.

Session 10 : Other mechanisms for regional and international cooperation by Mr. Bernard KAMDOUM T. PIASSINA, Head of Unit, Agence Nationale d'Investigation Financiere (ANIF) Cameroon

In his intervention, Mr. Kamdoum noted that the countering of terrorism financing is both multi-sectoral and transnational, hence the need for enhanced cooperation between actors, based on the rule of law. He affirmed global cooperation on the basis of the 1999 UN Convention; the UN Resolution 1373 as well as related Recommendations of FATF. In reference to regional or intercommunity cooperation in Central Africa, he recalled CEMAC Regulation of 11 April 2016, which introduced the technique to combat money laundering and counter terrorist financing; operationalized under the aegis of GABAC in Central Africa. In respect of international cooperation, he alluded to the Egmont Group's provision of access to Financial Information. He also affirmed the existence of judicial (Extradition) and Police (INTERPOL) cooperation. In conclusion, he drew attention to the absence of coordination committee for policies on AML/CFT at national level.

Session 11 : Presentation of Western Union's Financial Intelligence Unit and perspective of cooperation with public partners by Ms. Noemie CHEVASSU (online) Officer in charge of Law Enforcement Outreach and investigations, Africa, Western Union

In her presentation, Ms. Chevassu affirmed Western Union as one of the principal organisations of money transfers, making transfers of up to $100billion per annum, as recorded in 2021. She explained that Western Union is present in over 130 countries, having a global network covering over 200 territories and countries. Regarding its operations in Africa, she confirmed that it operates through agents, since it lacks a licence in Africa, and therefore has no legal or juridical obligation to deal with or cooperate with States or law enforcement agents in Africa, including on matters of countering the financing of terrorism.

However, she explained that Western Union's Financial Intelligence Unit produces own criminal analysis and risk prevention, as well as informs law enforcement agents, with the objective of the protection of their clients and agents. She noted that Western Union partners with repressive services and NGOs including UNODC and INTERPOL, among others. She concluded with a case study demonstrating the success of Western Union's strategy, which allowed the identification and arrest of a terrorist in Kenya who carried out multiple financial transactions through the abuse of the Western Union as well as other related networks.

Part Five : Lessons and Experiences on Countering Terrorist Financing in West and Central Africa

Moderated by Professor SAIBOU ISSA, Dean of FALSH, University of Maroua, Cameroon

Session 12 : Various lessons and experiences by Brigadier General ASSOUALAYE BLAMA, representing Major General Gold GU CHIBUSI, Commander of the Multinational Joint Task Force (MNJTF), Lake Chad Basin

In his submissions, Brig Gen Blama affirmed self-financing and external financing, as the main sources of financing for Boko Haram and the Islamic State in West Africa. Terrorists rely on the collection of illicit taxes levied on cattle ranchers and fishermen as well as kidnappings for ransom. He also linked the Centre of Gravity of terrorists in the region to their unique relations with the local population. In conclusion, he recommended that to more effectively counter the financing of terrorism, it will be necessary to intensify measures against money laundering, intensify regional cooperation, and close porous borders exploited by terrorists.

Session 13 : Addressing the Terrorism Financing in Africa: challenges of mobilising resources and implementing the regional strategy to fight against terrorism and its financing by Mr. Etienne TABI MBANG – Director of Studies, GABAC)

In his brief intervention, Mr TABI MBANG observed that the CEMAC sub-region suffers several, often highly organised rebel incursions by groups located mainly in the DRC, Chad and CAR. He noted that over the years, phenomena such as cybercrime and the use of cryptocurrency have become more rampant, which reveals innovation by criminal networks. He further explained that in view of supporting Member States in the region to set up national strategies, national risk assessments have been initiated and the implementation processes are already complete in the six Member States. He concluded with an emphasis on international cooperation, noting that platforms for exchanges have been established, comprising GABAC, GIABA, UNODC and the World Bank.

FINANCEMENT DU TERRORISME EN AFRIQUE CENTRALE : ACQUIS - CONTRAINTES - PERSPECTIVES

PRÉSENTÉ PAR ETIENNE TABI MBANG, DIRECTEUR DES ETUDES DU GABAC

Conclusion

At the end of the presentations, discussions and exchanges, the main recommendations that emerged from this two (2) day workshop are as follows :

In order to strengthen the strategic and operational capacities of actors and stakeholders involved in the prevention and countering of the financing of terrorism, especially institutional agents and field officers, stakeholders should :

- » Ensure the continuous training of actors and stakeholders, on risks of the financing of terrorism, financial investigations and prosecutions or lawsuits ;
- » Update knowledge and skills in prosecution services periodically, with the evolution in terrorism, and mutations in modus operandi of its financing ;
- » Popularize and disseminate standards and best practice, ensuring the flexibility, consistency and harmonisation of regional and community judicial procedures on matters of preventing and countering the financing of terrorism ;
- » Establish mechanisms for national and regional coordination of policies on countering money laundering and the financing of terrorism, notably to facilitate inter-agency information sharing.

In order to ensure the detection and freezing of funds destined for purposes of the financing of terrorism, stakeholders should :

- » Ensure the implementation of targeted financial sanctions mechanisms related to terrorism in accordance with United Nations Security Council Resolutions 1267 and 1373 ;
- » Strengthen capacities for research on the problematic of financing of terrorism, and ensure that competent authorities have access to databases linked to illicit financial flows;
- » Reinforce cooperation with the private sector by ensuring that various actors are aware of their obligations on matters of countering money laundering and the financing of terrorism, the communication of the lists of sanctions and sharing early warning indicators;

- » Establish partnerships with Non-Profit Organisations (NPOs) to ensure an understanding of the risks in the civil society sector, ensure the implementation of risk-based preventive measures and ensure the creation of awareness ;
- » Leverage more financial intelligence locally and internationally in preventing and countering the financing of terrorism, including the collection as well as management of proofs and evidence.

As a guiding principle, stakeholders should also ensure that mechanisms for countering the financing of terrorism are adapted to the economic and social context, based on risks, in order to promote financial inclusion and minimise the negative consequences on legitimate activities, especially of the Non-Profit Organisation sector.

Moreover, consequent upon supporting the implementation of these recommendations, it is desirable that APSTA and its member institutions, UNODC and the international community continue to encourage this type of event (workshop) for sharing best practice and fostering regional and international collaboration.

At the end of the workshop, APSTA expressed its profound gratitude to all those who, as partners, experts and participants, made it possible to achieve the objectives of this event.

The international workshop on "Countering the financing of terrorism in West and Central Africa" ended with the presentation of certificates of participation; the reading of the Final Declaration by Professor SAIBOU ISSA, Scientific Coordinator of the Sessions; and closing remarks by Mrs. Christine KOTNA, Branch manager UNODC, Yaoundé; as well as remarks and closure of the workshop by APSTA Chairperson, Colonel SOULEYMANE SANGARE.

In her closing remarks, Ms. Christine KOTNA, noted that States and regional economic communities lack sufficient resources, and also experience weak coordination of polices and laws on countering terrorism. Thus, she recommended as imperative, the pooling together of resources and the coordination of efforts, all aimed at effectively countering this scourge. In this regard, she affirmed UNODC's readiness to support the capacity building of actors.

Colonel SOULEYMANE SANGARE, in his remarks and prior to declaring the workshop closed, congratulated all experts and participants for the quality of proceedings and recommendations. He also commended the Executive Secretary of APSTA and her team for their diligence in organising yet another successful high-level international workshop and Open Day event.
